Susan,

Thanks for having the last group of photos I sent to you signed. The recipients are, needless to say, overjoyed. I have enclosed others, which I would appreciate your having signed, at your convenience.

Also, I've included a few letters from 2nd - 4th graders at a school in Ohio.

One of them came to The White House with her father for the President's Environmental Youth Awards ceremony in November.

The top letter, from a 2nd grader, is so filled with innocence and wisdom that I feel certain the President would like to read it. Please send it in to him, if not all of them - They are so supportive -

Thanks again -

Valentine's Day Dance

Valentine's Day is one of the Happy Days!

We've never had a Valentine's Day Dance here at the White House before, but Rosalynn loves to dance, and I knew if we had a dance she would make room in her schedule for me.

A couple of years ago, just before Valentine's Day, I was shocked to read that I had been named Lover of the Year. Then I read on and learned that I had been chosen because my wife and I had been in love for 31 years. The group felt that the kind of old-fashioned love which grew with the years, which expanded with the growth of our family and all the changes that building a life together brings, was important to our country. I was honored to have been chosen under those circumstances.

In the rush of our busy lives sometimes we forget to thank those whose caring sustains us day by day. We thought Valentine's Day would be a good time to let you know how much you mean to us. We're glad you all could come.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: James T. McIntyre, Jr.

SUBJECT: Extending Reorganization Plan Authority

This memorandum responds to your request to investigate extending your authority to propose reorganization plans. The authority to submit plans was granted to you under the Reorganization Act of 1977, for a three-year period that expires on April 6, 1980. Any plan submitted on or before April 6 will be treated with the expedited procedure and take effect, if not disapproved, within 60 legislative days. Frank Moore will send you a separate report in a few days, summarizing the results of our consultation with Congress.

Background

- ° You have used your reorganization authority for nine reorganization plans; four other reorganizations were accomplished by statute. (See Appendix A for a summary of these reorganizations, and a table of Presidential Use of Reorganization Plans since 1939.)
- ° Reorganization authority has not been continuous: each President since Roosevelt has gone without reorganization plan authority at some time during his tenure. (See Appendix B for a summary of lapses, by President, of the Reorganization Authority.)
- ° The traditional period of extension for reorganization authority has been two years, to allow each new Congress to reassess the expedited procedure required by the authority. In 1977, you requested a four-year extension, but were given three years as a compromise. A 1980 extension was foreseen in 1977, but Jack Brooks put us on notice that he would reopen substantive procedural issues on which he compromised in 1977 if we sought renewal.

Electrostatic Copy Made for Preservation Purposes

Options

The available options are:

1. to allow the reorganization plan authority to expire on April 6, 1980, by taking no action; or
2. seek Congressional approval of an extension of the reorganization plan authority:
 - a. for one year, until April 6, 1981, or
 - b. until the end of the 96th Congress.

Length of Extension

Any extension longer than a year is probably not feasible, because Congress has traditionally refused end-of-term extensions and does not like to bind succeeding Congresses to the expedited procedures of the plan authority. In addition, if we seek a long extension, it is clear that a demand will be made that we change the basic plan mechanism, which will entail hearings and some debate. (Seeking a short extension may avoid this problem.)

Regardless of the length of an extension, this Congress can only realistically deal with plans submitted by early July, due to summer recess and early adjournment plans.

° Extension for One Year

Extension for one year would coincide with the term you originally requested. The expiration date of April 6, 1981, would allow the new Congress to reexamine the reorganization plan authority early in the first session. (In fact, most extensions have run from April to April or June to June.)

° Extension Until the End of the 96th Congress

An extension until the end of the 96th Congress would coincide with the actual Congressional working schedule, and eliminate fears of presentation of plans to a new unorganized Congress in 1981.

Pros and Cons of Seeking Renewal of Reorganization Authority this Year

Reorganization authority has been an extremely useful management tool of the Presidency for almost fifty years. This has been especially true in this Administration. We are preparing to submit two plans this spring:

- Nuclear Regulatory Commission reform as a result of the Three-Mile Island incident. (Plan is being prepared for transmittal in February.)
- Creation of a central statistical unit in the Executive Office of the President. (Plan is being prepared for a transmittal in late March.)

While we have no current plans to use reorganization authority after April 6, contingencies could arise in international affairs, energy, or other policy areas where this authority would allow you to respond quickly to a crisis. The reorganization plan mechanism is uniquely suited for dealing with unpredictable occurrences with organizational ramifications such as the Three-Mile Island incident. There may be less controversial management or structural reforms -- for example, in the regulatory area -- where plan authority would be useful.

While renewal of authority preserves a useful Presidential power, some Congressional opposition to an extension is certain.

Political opposition to some of our reorganization proposals was heated. It will be difficult to avoid a restaging of those battles, especially those in which Congressional committees felt their jurisdiction threatened (e.g., Agriculture, Public Works, Foreign Relations). Concern over resurrection of a Department of Natural Resources should be anticipated. In addition, politically motivated debate might occur on the size of the Federal bureaucracy (e.g., our progress in reducing the government to 200 units).

A debate on renewal of reorganization authority will call into question again the issue of the constitutionality of the legislative veto for reorganization plans. Legislative vetoes over reorganization plans have been available for almost fifty years, yet, their constitutionality has been challenged at nearly every extension. You are strenuously opposing other uses of a legislative veto as proposed in several bills under serious consideration by Congress. A distinction between the two types of veto can be made, but a debate on the question may confuse our argument against legislative veto per se.

An end-of-term extension might be politically risky, in view of past experience. President Eisenhower did not have or seek the authority for the last six months of his second term. President Johnson, in March 1968, requested an extension beyond the December 31, 1968 expiration, into the next term. That request died on the Senate calendar. In 1973, during President Nixon's second term, a bill to extend the authority for four years was not scheduled for hearings in either House. President Ford's request in 1975 for a four-year extension likewise received no support.

Despite some opposition, Congressional approval can probably be expected. Brooks and Ribicoff will probably support a simple extension. The degree of opposition from the Agriculture and Public Works Committees is being assessed. Republican sentiment has not yet been tested. Frank Moore will prepare a legislative strategy memo as soon as these contacts are completed.

REORGANIZATION INITIATIVES - 1977-1979

The Administration has sent 13 reorganization initiatives to the Congress and had them all approved.

Reorganization Authority Legislation: Congress in 1977 gave to the President authority to restructure the government through the use of reorganization plans. Congress had refused to give Presidents this authority since the Nixon Administration.

Executive Office of the President: Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1977 dealt with the Executive Office of the President. This plan reduced the number of units in the Executive Office, reduced the size of the White House staff, and set up an improved decision process for domestic policy and Presidential agenda setting.

Energy: A Department of Energy was established in 1977 to ensure that responsibility for energy-related functions will be vested in one organization that can be held accountable for Federal energy policy.

International Communications: Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1977 merged the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs into a new United States International Communication Agency. This reorganization provided a more efficient and objective setting for the carrying out of U.S. public diplomacy and cultural and educational programs overseas.

Civil Rights Enforcement: Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1978 consolidated the government's equal employment opportunity enforcement activities. Its purpose was to both strengthen civil rights enforcement and reduce jurisdictional overlap and duplication. The President has also set up a new civil rights unit in OMB to monitor civil rights enforcement governmentwide.

Civil Service Reform Legislation: One of the most far-reaching of the President's management improvement efforts has been the reform of our hundred-year-old civil service system. Under this reform, Federal managers have been given greatly increased authority, flexibility, and incentives to manage the Federal workforce. Civil Service Reform will invigorate and increase the efficiency to recruit, retain, and reward dedicated, competent and productive Federal employees.

Personnel Management Structure: Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978 split the Civil Service System into an Office of Personnel Management and an independent Merit Systems Protection Board. Its purpose was to establish a clear-cut responsibility for personnel performance and protection of employee merit system rights.

Federal Emergency Management Assistance: Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1978 consolidated Federal disaster programs concerned with civil, natural, and man-made disasters. Its purpose was to make a single agency accountable for all Federal disaster preparedness, mitigation and relief activities. The success of this reorganization was demonstrated in the Federal Government's swift response to communities damaged by Hurricane Frederick.

Pension Regulation: Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 clarified the responsibilities of the Labor and Treasury Departments for implementing the Employee Retirement Income Security Act and reduced some of the red tape in enforcement of this program. Seventy percent of the backlog of requests for exemptions had been closed by November 1, 1979.

Federal Inspector: Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1979 has consolidated enforcement functions related to the proposed Alaska Natural Gas Pipeline under a single Federal Inspector. This Plan creates a unique institution to cut red tape and delay on a critical energy project of national importance.

International Development Cooperation Agency: Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1979 has combined U.S. international development assistance programs into a new International Development Cooperation Agency. This Plan carries out reforms in the organization of foreign aid first proposed by the late Senator Hubert Humphrey.

Education: Congress has approved the creation of a Cabinet-level Department of Education consolidating over 150 Federal education programs. Creation of the new Department will lead to better management of education programs, reduce red tape and duplication, and give education the Cabinet voice and national leadership this important function deserves.

Trade: Congress has approved a major reorganization to strengthen the Federal Government's international trade functions. By centralizing authority and improving coordination in trade policy, this Plan will help the Federal Government ensure that the trade opportunities for American business in the MTN Agreement are fully realized. In conjunction with MTN, the trade reorganization is a major step in increasing the government's capacity to strengthen the export performance and import competitiveness of U.S. industry.

Jody called at 4:30 p.m. ---- saying there's no way of telling yet what the final results will be --- he thinks were in for a tough fight -- too close to call.

We're doing better in some southern areas than expected but not so well as we expected in some northern areas. We barely lost Saco which is encouraging - won Augusta -- He's concerned that we're losing some of our people because of the heavy turn-out and the slow process of voting (long lines, etc.) Bottom line is we just don't know at this point. Only 16% of vote is in.

III. TALKING POINTS

I. You have always felt that the direction which comes from ministers to a community is of utmost importance. You are pleased that people like Rev. Ruben Cruz are an example of the kind of community position a minister should hold. You understand, more and more Hispanic ministers have taken strong leadership roles in the Hispanic community in the country. (For example, Rev. Jaime Davila, Rev. Alberto Filomeno, Rev. James L. Novarro and Rev. Aurea Martinez.)

2. You want to thank them for the spiritual support that you know they have given you and encourage them to continue their work as more than ever, the people of this country need spiritual guidance.

3. Even though there is still much to be done, you are proud that this Administration has appointed more Hispanics than any other previous Administration and that there has been closer communication with the Spanish-speaking leadership of the country.

Office of the White House Press Secretary

THE WHITE HOUSE

The President has ordered the cancellation of an operation in Iran which was underway to prepare for a rescue of our hostages. The mission was terminated because of equipment failure. During the subsequent withdrawal of American personnel there was a collision between our aircraft on the ground at a remote desert location in Iran. There were no military hostilities, but the President deeply regrets that eight American crew members of the two aircraft were killed and others were injured in the accident. Americans involved in the operation have now been airlifted from Iran, and those who were injured are being given medical treatment and are expected to recover.

This mission was not motivated by hostility toward Iran or the Iranian people, and there were no Iranian casualties.

Preparations for this rescue mission were ordered for humanitarian reasons, to protect the national interests of this country, and to alleviate international tensions. The President accepts full responsibility for the decision to attempt the rescue.

The nation is deeply grateful to the brave men who were preparing to rescue the hostages.

The United States continues to hold the Government of Iran responsible for the safety of the American hostages.

The United States remains determined to obtain their safe release at the earliest possible date.
